

Fixing cracks

January 31-2010

One of the disadvantages of an RTM house is that it gets damaged during transport. We knew this upfront and it's only cosmetic but it took a while before they came to repair it. They were very busy and when they gave us a date right before Christmas we declined that because we didn't want the house to be a mess during Christmas.

But it's finally happening, we got an experienced warranty tech in who will be at our house for at least 2 weeks to fix everything that got damaged. He is from Saskatoon and stays in a hotel in North Battleford all week which is about a 25 min drive to our house. He seems to be very skilled and is also very friendly.

The damage is mainly drywall cracks and nail pops so it's mostly mudding, sanding and painting. Besides that there are a few cracked tiles and some other small things that need to get fixed. We're in a little bit of a mess again but when he is finished we can finally decorate the house, put up some curtains and a painting and make it homy again, we are really looking forward to that!

TV

After 6 months without a television we felt it was time to get one so we got ourselves a brand new TV. We had the house builder made up a special TV cabinet in the kitchen so we could watch the news during breakfast or the game if it's on during supper. We won't have a TV in the living room but when the basement is finished we're thinking of putting up an entertainment system in there. We haven't missed TV programs at all but we do like to watch a lot of DVD's so we're glad we can do that now.

Typical drywall crack