

It giet ohn!

November 23-2009

These are the famous words they say in Holland when the “eleven city skating tour” is held. It hardly ever takes place though because the winters usually aren’t cold enough. But it giet ohn at our private skating rink. We have to get used to the long skating season because we didn’t even know the ice was already thick enough until our neighbor phoned and asked if he could skate on our pond with his kids. He even drove on it with his quad so I guess it’s good enough! So we also went out yesterday, a little shaky (Vince) ☺ but 10 times better than last year. The weather was great, temperature around 0° Celsius, no wind and sunny. It’s only a 5 minute walk down the hill from the house. You have to stay away from the beaver lodge though because they still kept part of the pond open. Because we haven’t had any snow yet we can skate on the entire pond but when the snow arrives we will have to clear an area for skating. We will probably have a quad with a snow blade in the future for clearing the ice. So for now it is hard labor or a little help from the neighbor and his snow blower.
